POLISCI 388: Corporate Lobbying and The Global Economy

Course Description:
This course centers on one of the most important yet under-appreciated aspects of contemporary political life: the governance of the global economy by private actors. It covers both theoretical and empirical perspectives on how, when, and why private actors are able to influence international institutions, global standards and regulations, and international negotiation processes. Some basic familiarity with international political economy (IPE), economics, and international relations will be extremely helpful.

CS2 - CPE Summer Session 2 (7/11-8/19)
Gen. Ed. / Credits: 4

Instructor: Kevin Young
My research focuses on issues germane to international political economy, in particular the politics of financial regulation, transnational policy networks, and the role of private business in shaping global governance. I am particularly interested in analyzing the ways in which regulatory policy is affected by networks of elites and interest groups.
