Gráinne Teggart

Gráinne Teggart is Northern Ireland Deputy Director for Amnesty International UK where she leads its campaigns, strategic litigation and political affairs across a range of human rights issues. Grainne has a well-established track record of bringing about critical human rights change and is a respected human rights commentator – frequently appearing in local, national and international media on key human rights issues. Grainne is leading Amnesty UK's campaign on achieving a human rights compliant way to deal with the legacy of the past and working closely with a number of victims and she also recently led Amnesty's campaign to overturn a 160-year-old abortion ban in Northern Ireland, playing a key role in challenging the law through the courts and advocating for change in the UK Parliament. Outside of Amnesty, Grainne is also a Director of the Integrated Education Fund and Informing Choices NI.
